Information for you

Are you keeping yourself from making discoveries?

Are you obsessing on a mistake you made? Lots of people do this, constantly running the scenarios of the disastrous day or day or redemptive rewrites of it through their minds. But allowing yourself to participate in this is a waste of energy and unusual punishment for yourself.

If you catch yourself running these movies in your mind, you might tell yourself to get a grip and stop! If you find you can't be gentle and kind, like you would to a sensitive child who's made a mistake. Ask yourself what you hope to accomplish by mentally harassing yourself? The answer to the question will probably make you stop.

After all, if you reflect on the wise words of James Joyce, you might find that focusing on the mistake in this way is keeping you from what might be truly advantageous from the experience. Joyce said,

"A man's errors are his portals of discovery."

This display on Flip Flops is located on North Campus and was created by Visual Merchandising—MKT 122.
