

Higher Education Notes

Corjay to head biotechnology at RCCC

Martha “Marcy” Corjay is the new head of the biotechnology program at Rowan-Cabarrus Community College.

She will develop and lead RCCC's new associate degree program in biotechnology.

A resident of Huntersville, she comes to RCCC after two years as a biology instructor at Bluegrass Community & Technical College in Lexington, Ky. Before that she taught biology at Eastern Kentucky University and was an associate professor in the department of cardiology at the University of Virginia.

She has 23 scientific peer-reviewed publications and has more than 10 years of research and development experience in biotechnology industry and five years of college-level teaching experience.

Rowan County

The Rowan County Board of Commissioners have made the following appointments to education boards:

Nancy Bilson of Salisbury was named to the Rowan-Cabarrus Community College board of trustees. Her term will run through June 30, 2010. She will complete the term of George Knox, who retired from the board in May.

Pat Fulcher, vice president of associate services for Food Lion LLC, was reappointed to the RCCC board for a term ending June 30, 2012. She has been a trustee since 2004.

Susan Kluttz, mayor of Salisbury, was reappointed to the board the Rowan-Salisbury Board of Education for a term ending June 30, 2012. She joined the board in 2000.